PUTTING FLORIDA ON THE MAP

6,148 international students

Florida is known for sunshine, and Gainesville has plenty. 280 days worth each year. The University of Florida is shining a spotlight on this city of 120,000 residents, by creating an innovative campus based on the enduring foundations of its land-grant mission, from its inception as a university in 1905.

With determined faculty and students conducting research on critical topics across land and sea, in cities and rural communities, UF is a prime location for studying urgent challenges facing Florida and the world. Students here are active achievers, seeking opportunities to further their own goals and add their own contributions across many academic programs.

Research at the university grounds its success, but UF’s teaching and service share its benefits beyond our small city. It’s easy to get to know fellow Gators here, as faculty, students and staff take pride in sharing all that the university can offer. Attending UF means contributing to one of the most diverse and dynamic campuses in the world.

Welcome to a new future.

Graduate students and faculty are working towards solutions to critical needs for today’s world, and future generations.

The university is committed to forward-looking projects like Challenge 2050, which will design improvements in food production, energy consumption, and environmental impact.

Various research areas have been prioritized by the university for their future and lasting impact, including cybersecurity, informatics, neuroscience, archaeology, early childhood interventions, and social network analysis.

Students are also securing employment in faculty, government, industry, and non-profit jobs in these areas of critical need.
